

FOR ARBITRATION OF TOLLS DISPUTE

take, which, I fear, will wreck his political future. The final answer of administration forces to the arguments marshaled against repeal of the Panama tolls exemption was made in the Senate today by Senator Simmons, who had been a prominent figure in the tolls hearings before the Senate Inter-oceanic Canal Committee. The North Carolina Senator argued that the exemption of American coastwise vessels would be a discrimination forbidden by the binding treaty between the United States and Great Britain, and unwise as a domestic policy.

DISCRIMINATION SLUR

"Does any one believe," he asked, "that our neighbors to the north and to the south will view with complacency the discriminatory conditions of tolls exemption for American coastwise vessels, following the example of the canal? Does any one doubt that this discrimination, not only against their commerce, but against their vessels, will cause them to look upon us with doubt? It will not only prejudicially affect our present friendly relations with them, but will tend to defeat one of the main objects we had in view in the construction of this canal, namely, to further cement our political relations and to extend our trade and commerce with the countries of this hemisphere?"

SENTIMENT OF DOCTRINE

To stand by the tolls exemption law, Senator Simmons declared, was to become the leader among the nations of the world in a reactionary movement to re-establish the old principal of selfishness and isolation, which had been supplanted by the doctrine of reciprocal equality.

WORLD-WIDE PUBLIC SENTIMENT OF DOCTRINE

To stand by the law, he added, would mean that the United States would be confronted with a world-wide public sentiment of chagrin, distrust, disapproval and resentment.

SHAFT IN MEMORY OF SOUTHERN DEAD

night at the Brighton of Professor R. A. Rice, of the Library of Congress. LOOKS WITH PLEASURE TO MEETING PRESIDENT Sir Moses has never met President Wilson, and is looking forward with pleasure to seeing him. He knows former President Roosevelt well, and likes him. Of the President he said: "I heard of Woodrow Wilson some three and a half years ago from President Alderman, of the University of Virginia. I had gone there when my son, Thomas Jefferson, was unveiled, and was the guest of President Alderman. He spoke of Woodrow Wilson in the highest terms, and said he believed Wilson would be the next President of the United States. From Dr. Alderman's description of him I thought he would be an excellent man for President, so when I got back to Rome and was asked by my friends, Ambassador and Mrs. O'Brien, about American politics, I remarked that Woodrow Wilson would probably be the next President. They were amazed to hear I got such an idea, and said that they could think of nothing more improbable, and could not imagine how I had gotten such an idea.

"Oh, said I, my opinion is based not on my own knowledge, but on what was told me by a man in whom I have great confidence. I think at that time Mr. Wilson had not yet been elected an Ambassador and Mrs. O'Brien, about American politics, I remarked that Woodrow Wilson would probably be the next President. They were amazed to hear I got such an idea, and said that they could think of nothing more improbable, and could not imagine how I had gotten such an idea.

"Another prophecy—and this was my own—came true in a rather curious way. An Ambassador, namely, Mr. O'Brien and I were discussing one day just after the election of Wilson who would be the next ambassador to Italy. I suggested that I thought it would be Thomas Nelson Page, the son of my father, to whom I had known and loved Page for many years, and had often been his guest, without having much of an idea that the sum of the matter would be so. You may imagine my delight when I heard that my old friend was really coming to Italy. It makes it very delightful for me to have the Pages here, as you may suppose."

IN "NEWMARKET" BATTLE WITH CADETS OF THE V. M. I.

At seventeen Moses Ezekiel went to Virginia Military Institute, Lexington. From there, in 1864, he marched with the 225 cadets to "Newmarket," where—side by side with seasoned veterans—these boys planted their company's victorious flag upon the banner of splendid Federal forces. All the experiences of active service, victory, defeat, feasting upon the full garner of the enemy and fasting on their own scanty ones, the impressions of a youthful patriot that future years were to bring forth in deathless bronze and marble.

Across the Speaker's desk in the national House is his head of Jefferson, in the navy-yard there is his Farragut; in the niches on the outside Alabam Art Gallery are his colossal statues of great art.

In front upholds the south when she is sinking down and trying to sustain herself in the shield of the old Confederation, which she had set up for herself at Richmond.

The attitude and the general effect of the thirty-two figures around the relief, as a group, illustrate in a striking manner the enthusiasm that animated the south when the tocsin of war sounded, and, in detail, these figures exhibit every phase of the heroic and sacrificial of the period; the preacher and his wife, bidding good-bye to their schoolboy son; the bride putting the sword and sash around her lover's waist, etc.

IN APPRECIATION OF GENIUS

The Emperor of Germany and the Emperor of Russia have conferred upon him the highest crosses and the Queen of Italy the cross of an officer of the crown. He has been honored and feted in all possible ways in appreciation of his genius.

In Paris his "Christ Entombed" reposes in the chapel built as a memorial to the victims of that frightful bazaar fire which staggered humanity some years ago. On stands in awe and silence before this figure of majestic serenity—the power of final triumph is upon the beautiful face, and your heart is filled with the love that is past understanding. Sir Moses always puts the finishing touches himself upon the marble, and he devoted three years of patient labor to this one.

His Napoleon has been called the "History of Napoleon," so comprehensive is it, and it is now in Los Angeles, Cal.

Sir Moses visited Baltimore yesterday to consult with those who are in charge of the erection of a statue to Edgar Allan Poe, which the sculptor is designing.

PERMISSION TO ERECT SHAFT

THE INTER-OCEANIC CANAL SHAFT Secretary of War, in charge of the office of the national cemetery, gave to the United Daughters of the Confederacy, a letter to John H. Williams, who had written at the instance of Mrs. Thompson, permission to erect the monument, inscriptions subject to approval by the Secretary of War; and the inscriptions actually on the monument as erected have been approved by Lindsey M. Garrison, present Secretary of War.

In 1907 the committee had raised quite a sum, but the major part of the work it had undertaken, and its significance, grew upon it. The bodies represented nearly, if not quite, every State of the late Confederacy; the monument was to be in the national cemetery at Arlington, a memorial to the rank and file of the whole Confederate army. Request was therefore made that the task be taken over by the United Daughters of the Confederacy, an organization with chapters all over the South and in many Northern States.

At their annual convention in 1907 the United Daughters of the Confederacy took over the work, organized an Arlington Confederate Monument Association of their own, and continued the existing executive committee at Washington. Later a committee on sign was formed.

In November, 1910, the following members of the committee on design convened at Washington: Mrs. Cornelia Branch Stone, chairman; Rev. H. H. McKim, D. D., Mrs. Marion Butler, Hilary A. Herbert and Wallace Greaser.

Sir Moses Ezekiel, the great Virginia sculptor, whose studio is in Rome, Italy, and who was then in Richmond, was called before the committee. The artist had never sought the committee, but when called before it he had a design already in mind. This he outlined as a heroic-sized figure, typifying the South; in her extended right hand a laurel wreath with which to crown the dead; her left hand resting on a plowstock, and underneath, on a circular base, figures representing the heroism and sacrifices of the men and women of the South. The contract gave the artist a free hand.

MONUMENT OF BRONZE WITH HEROIC FIGURES

The completed monument, including the base of plinth and three heroic-sized figures, all in full relief, surrounding it, is entirely of bronze. It stands upon a foundation of beautiful dark gray, highly polished Woodstock granite. The base of the South, the plow stock and sickle and verso from the Scriptures constitute the synthesis of the whole work. It means, primarily, peace.

The South (the monument) rests her faith in the future on labor, while she holds a laurel wreath to crown the memory of her dead and wears, herself, a wreath of olive leaves, sacred to Minerva, the goddess, who in the group

This threat was uttered by Sylvia Parkhurst at a meeting at Lime House to-night. She declared she would carry it into effect should the suffragettes fail in their endeavor to see the Prime Minister on June 10. Other speakers suggested wholesale incendiarism.

OBJECT TO FEATURES OF ANTITRUST BILLS

Railroad Presidents Criticize Methods Proposed to Correct Existing Evil. Washington, June 3.—Two railroad presidents and one railroad lawyer spent five hours to-day in pointing out to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee many objections they have found to features of the antitrust bills now before Congress, which vitally affect common carriers. The railroad men agreed there possibly was a need for legislation designed to prevent evils that appeared in the railroad affairs in the past, but they criticized the methods proposed in the bill for their correction.

Judge Robert S. Lovett, president of the Union Pacific, E. B. Ripley, president of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, and A. H. Harris, general counsel for the New York Central, were the speakers. Other railroad men will appear to-morrow.

"There is no more reason to legislate on the theory that all railroads are dishonest than there is to say that because burglars operate after dark nobody shall be allowed out at night," was the way Judge Lovett summed up his criticisms.

Judge Lovett objected to the provision prohibiting interlocking directorates, and doubted the wisdom of giving to the Interstate Commerce Commission broad powers over the issue of railroad securities.

ASK ADDITIONAL DATA

West Virginia Senators Want to Know Strike Situation.

Charleston, W. Va., June 3.—United States Senators William E. Chilton and Nathan Goff, of West Virginia, telegraphed from Washington to-night asking Kanawha Valley coal operators for additional data concerning the strike situation.

The telegram was in response to one sent yesterday by the operators to President Wilson, Secretary Wilson, Attorney-General McReynolds and West Virginia's representatives in Congress, urging an early Federal investigation of conditions in the Kanawha, where 8,000 men are on strike.

Officials of the United Mine Workers of America to-day expressed a willingness to place the dispute before President Wilson, Governor Hatfield, West Virginia, or any kind of a tribunal that is agreeable to the operators.

LEVER BILL TO BE REPORTED.

Designed to Regulate Dealings in Cotton for Future Delivery.

Washington, June 3.—The House Agricultural Committee to-night agreed to report favorably the Lever bill, to regulate dealings in cotton for future delivery, with an amendment to tax so-called gambling transactions transferred from the domestic to a foreign market.

The measure would levy a tax of one-fifth of 1 per cent for each pound of cotton involved in any contract or sale of cotton for future delivery made on exchanges. It would provide for standardization of cotton grades, and authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to designate from time to time what markets shall be considered bona fide spot markets.

Miss T. R. asks: "Do you think a weight of 190 pounds is too much for a girl of medium height, and what can I safely take to reduce about 30 pounds?" Answer: Your weight is excessive, and if it increases it may cause much suffering. I advise you to take the regular use of 5-grain arsenic tablets, which are sold by most pharmacists. I advise you to take full directions for self-administration.

"Carpenter" writes: "My liver and kidneys are in a bad condition. I have dizzy spells and dark spots before my eyes. Also have twinges of rheumatism." Answer: To relieve kidney and liver trouble use three-grain sulphur tablets (with arsenic), these are packed in sealed tubes with full directions for taking. They act pleasantly and tone up the bowels and liver and purify the blood, and are a convenient, effective and highly curative.

"Phoebe" writes: "The following will correct your children of bedwetting: 1 dram tincture cubeb and 1 oz. comp. fluid salicylate. Mix, and give 10 drops from 10 to 15 drops in water about one hour before each meal." "Maud" writes: "I have suffered a great deal with catarrh. It gives me headaches, affects my eyes and my throat. I have tried many remedies, but nothing to cure it. Only my nostrils and throat are affected."

"Ray" writes: "Can a sufferer from bronchial trouble be relieved? Doctors do not seem to help me. What would you suggest?" Answer: To cure chronic cold, sore throat and bronchitis, I would advise the use of concentrated essence mentholine. Purchase this at any drug store in 2 1/2 oz. packages and mix according to directions given on the package, and you will very shortly be relieved of all bronchial trouble. This will not only cure you, but will correct, and is very pleasant to take.

"Hilda" says: "I cannot eat without great distress after eating. I am sleepless and restless, nervous and irritable. Can you tell me anything that would cure me?" Answer: Your trouble is all due to your stomach, which causes the nervous, restless feeling. Take tablets tripeptone and you will soon be relieved of all this trouble. These are packed in sealed cartons, and are pink, white and blue tablets to be taken after meals. Take the pink tablet after breakfast, white after dinner and blue after supper. If this is continued, the curative agencies will soon restore natural digestion.

"W. W." writes: "I wake in the morning as tired as when I retired. My stomach feels weak, my arms and head ache, and I look very tired upon the day's work. I seem to have no energy or recuperative forces. Severe headaches, dizziness and depression at my condition are symptoms." Answer: The vital forces have ebbed low, and your nerves need stimulating. While your tablets are taken after meals to supply energy. Begin taking three-grain codonine tablets, and continue until recovery is satisfactory. Get an original sealed tube with full directions.

"Old Couple" writes: "My wife and I are both victims of kidney and bladder disorders and have taken treatment for some time, but to no avail. Will you give us your advice?" Answer: "The ordinary symptoms from such disorders are puffing under the eyes, swelling ankles, feverishness, dry skin, bloodshot eyes, pains like rheumatism, and a too scant or copious flow of urine with frequent calls, especially at night. The best prescription I can give is balmwort tablets, a splendid compound, especially for such troubles. Obtain in sealed tubes with full directions."—Advertisement.
